INTRODUCTION

The field of liquid crystal, LC, polymers is now almost thirty years old if it can be considered to have begun in 1956 with the theories of Flory on solutions of rigid-rod polymers and the observation of the lyotropic behavior of concentrated solutions of poly(benzyl-L-glutamate) in the laboratories of Courtaulds Ltd. in the same year. The observations of lyotropic behavior of solutions of aromatic polyamides in the du Pont laboratories in the late 1960s, which led to the development of the "Kevlar" fiber, undoubtedly provided the greatest stimulus to this field. While thermotropic aromatic polyesters were prepared in the laboratories of the ICI Company at about the same time, the potential for their application in fibers was probably not recognized until the early 1970s. At about that time, investigations on the application of aromatic polyesters for molded plastics, which were liquid crystalline in the melt state, were also begun at the Carborundum Co. and the Tennessee Eastman Co. Hence, the field of thermotropic polymers is only about ten years old, but in the last five years or so there has been an "explosion" in interest and the activity on such polymers.

This explosion can be readily seen from the number of conferences and symposia which have recently been devoted to this subject, including the following:

- (1) May 19-23, 1981 - Seminar on "Polymer Liquid Crystals: Science and Technology" at Santa Margherita Ligure, Italy, with 12 presentations.

- (2) March 25-April 2, 1982 - Symposium on "Liquid Crystals" including polymers, at the American Chemical Society meeting in Las Vegas, Nevada, with 12 talks on polymers.
- (3) July 12-16, 1983 - Min-symposium on "Rigid Rod Polymers" at the IUPAC Macromolecular Symposium in Amherst, Mass., with 35 talks on liquid crystal polymers.
- (4) August 28-September 2, 1983 - Symposium at the American Chemical Society meeting in Washington, D.C., on "Polymer Liquid Crystals" with 41 presentations.
- (5) September 12-14, 1983 - European Science Foundation Workshop on "Liquid Crystal Polymer Systems" in Copenhagen, Denmark, with 36 presentations.
- (6) July 16-20, 1983 - International Conference on Liquid Crystals in York, England, with several main lectures and numerous posters on liquid crystal polymers.

The large number of patents issuing from industrial laboratories is also indicative of this interest.

In spite of this degree of activity, there has been very little systematic information on such basic topics as the relationships between structure and type of liquid crystallinity, solution and solid state organization and morphology, degree of liquid crystallinity, phase transition behaviors and rates, degree of ordering, rheology, and so on. Indeed, there seems to be even little recognition of what areas of research should be initiated, and there appears to be almost no cooperation between the organic chemists, physical chemists, physicists and engineers on developing an approach to defining the important problems in this field. It was felt, therefore, that a mechanism was needed for bringing these disciplines together, including individuals from both industry and university research laboratories, in an environment conducive to an intimate and free exchange of ideas and to the development of personal contacts. For this purpose, a proposal was submitted to the Gordon Research Conference organization, and approved by them, to hold a special conference on "Liquid Crystal Polymers." This conference was held at the Colby-Sawyer College in New London, NH, during the week of July 9-13, 1984.

CONFERENCE ORGANIZATION

Financial support for the Conference was received from the Gordon Research Conferences and in the form of grants from the Air Force Office of Scientific Research, the National Science Foundation, and the Office of Naval Research. The Conference was attended by 150 scientists from universities and industries from many different countries, as shown in the registration list in Table 1. Additional applications for attendance were also received, but the maximum number of participants which the Gordon Research Conferences will accept for any conference is 150. The distribution of attendees was approximately 70% from universities and government and 30% from industry.

The technical program of the Conference included 22 main lectures and 34 poster presentations. The speakers and titles of the main lectures were as follows:

1. S. L. Kwolek, E. I. du Pont Co., "Thermotropic LC Polyesters"
2. W. J. Jackson, Eastman Kodak Co., "ILC Copolymers"
3. A. C. Griffin, University of Southern Mississippi, "New Main Chain Polymer Liquid Crystals"

4. E. Chiellini, University of Pisa, Italy, "Optically Active Main Chain Thermotropic Polymers"
5. J.-I. Jin, Korea University, "Thermotropic Main Chain Polyesters with Flexible Spacers"
6. A. Blumstein, University of Lowell, "Structure-Property Correlations in Thermotropic Polyesters"
7. A. Sirigu, University of Naples, Italy, "Mesopnasic Properties of Linear LC Copolymers"
8. J. Blackwell, Case Western Reserve University, "X-ray Studies of Thermotropic Aromatic Copolyesters"
9. C. Noel, ESPCI, France, "Characterization of Liquid Crystalline Mesophases"
10. G. Hardy, Research Institute for Plastics, Hungary, "Side Chain LC Polymers"
11. R. Zentel, Freiburg University, West Germany, "New Types of LC Polymers"
12. G. Strobl, University of Mainz, West Germany, "Dielectric Relaxation in Side Chain LC Polymers"
13. G. Kothe, University of Stuttgart, West Germany, "Nuclear Spinlabel Studies of LC Polymers"
14. W. R. Krigbaum, Duke University, "Phase Diagrams of Nematogen Systems"
15. E. T. Samulski, University of Connecticut, "Alkyl Chain Flexibility in Polymeric LCs"
16. H. Finkelmann, Clausthal University, West Germany, "Novel Physico-Chemical Investigations of LC Side Chain Polymers"
17. G. C. Berry, Carnegie-Mellon University, "Rheological Studies on Solutions of Mesogenic Rodlike Polymers"
18. T. Asada, Kyoto University, Japan, "Rheo-optical Studies on Lyotropic Polymer LCs"
19. P. Flory, Stanford University, "Concepts and Theories: Present in Retrospect"
20. L. Chapoy, Technical Institute of Denmark, "Prospects for Photoelectric LC Polymers"
21. B. Wunderlich, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, "Confirmation-Disordered (Condis) Polymer Crystals"
22. T. G. Ryan, ICI Co., "Applications of Thermotropic Polyesters"

The authors and titles of the poster presentations are listed in Table 2, and the complete mailing addresses for all speakers and chairpersons (discussion leaders) are given in Table 3.

The funds provided for the Conference by the agencies listed above were used only for the payment of the fixed fees (registration, room and meals) for all of the speakers and chairpersons, except those from industry, and also for specially invited participants. The latter were principally young faculty members and graduate students from American universities, including the following individuals:

R. J. Laub, San Diego State University (faculty)
S. I. Stupp, University of Illinois (faculty)
D. Behm, University of Massachusetts (student)
J. Tuttle, University of Massachusetts (student)
S. MacKenzie, University of Massachusetts (student)
C. Wu, Southeastern Massachusetts University (faculty)
H. Winter, University of Massachusetts (faculty)
S. Kantor, University of Massachusetts (faculty)
A. Tipton, University of Massachusetts (student)
E. George, University of Massachusetts (student)
W. Pawlowski, North Carolina State University (student)
B. Wood, University of Massachusetts (student)
F. Lonberg, Brandeis University (student)
S. Kumar, Lowell University (student)
Y. Ozcayir, Lowell University (student)
J. Mailon, University of Massachusetts (student)
M. C. Muir, University of Massachusetts (student)
P. Hahn, University of Massachusetts (student)
P. Manson, University of Massachusetts (faculty)
E. Magat, Duke University (faculty)
E. Thomas, University of Massachusetts (faculty)
L.-P. Yu, University of Connecticut (student)
M. Poliks, University of Connecticut (student)
J. Aadduci, Rochester Institute of Technology (faculty)
V. Subramanian, University of Louisville (student)

CONCLUSION

Virtually all of the participants agreed that the goal of the Conference of bringing together chemists, physicists and engineers to discuss the latest state of understanding and opportunities for applications of liquid crystal polymers and to help define the areas for future research and development was achieved. The program included lectures on subjects ranging from organic chemistry to applications and including theory and physics, synthesis, structure, physical properties, transitions, morphology, rheology, and viscoelastic and mechanical properties of both thermotropic and lyotropic polymers.

As a result of the success of this format and conference plan, and as indicated by the very large attendance and the enthusiastic response of the attendees, it is likely that a second Gordon Research Conference will be held in July 1985 with Prof. Roger S. Porter as its chairman.
